OVERVIEW

The Film/Digital/Video Program’s partnership with the Open Student Television Network will allow Duke students to have an opportunity to screen their production work in an international forum. In addition, they will have an opportunity to watch work created by other students at peer institutions all over the world.

OSTN (Open Student Television Network) is a non-profit venture sponsored by a consortium of universities called CampusEAI (www.campuseai.org). OSTN’s mission is to connect student television stations and film programs internationally through a digital delivery system of student-produced content.
